NASHUA — A man accused of pooping on the floor during a burglary has a history of criminal activity. On Monday, Christopher Rosati, 26, was arrested and charged by police with burglary, theft, criminal mischief, and breach of bail conditions.

While he was out on bail for a July 17 arrest, police received reports of a burglary at 1st International Auto at 475 Daniel Webster Highway in Merrimack.

Surveillance footage showed a man, later identified as Rosati, breaking into the property through a window in the garage, pooping on the floor and wiping himself with the shirt he was wearing, court documents say. He then broke into a locked safe, took nothing, and proceed to take five sets of keys to a 2001 BMW 740i, a 2005 Mercedes S500, a 2006 Toyota Tacoma, a 2008 Audi A4 and a 2009 Scion XD.

Out of these cars, he took the Scion using it to push a 2005 Mercedes S500 out of the way to escape, documents state. Police later found the Scion in a parking lot in Nashua.

These aren't the only peculiar things about Rosati's burglaries.

Not only did police notice he was wearing the exact same outfit — a Champion T-shirt, a two-toned Red Sox hat and light-colored work boots — in the footage as he was in booking photo and previous burglary surveillance footage, but after burglarizing Currier Orchards in Merrimack, police found several honey sticks on him.

Rosati's bail was set at $25,000 cash.
