The Grossest Commercials for Products We'd Still Throw Our Money At

It's bad enough that we have to watch them, but sometimes companies make commercials that are unbearable.

Some companies even pride themselves on the grotesque advertising.

It's like a car wreck. You just can't look away.

Here are the grossest commercials out there.

Go Daddy 2013 Super Bowl Commercial

The Go Daddy Super Bowl add was downright disgusting.

It's the noises. The slurping.

The moist kiss.

Blegh.

Skittles Commercial: Skittles Pox

Why in the world would you compare your product to an S.T.D.?

From there, the commercial goes even further downhill.

The worst part is when the girl pulls a Skittle from his face and his skin is tugged just the slightest because of the sugar coating of the candy.

That and her eyebrows.

Charmin Ultra 2010 Toilet Paper Commercial

OK, this commercial is not too gross, but the topic is.

Charmin does deserve credit for a decent attempt at attacking the topic of leftover paper in your butthole but it's still cringeworthy.

If you're going to talk about poop, buttholes, and toilet paper, the best way to do it is with a cute little bear with a big heiny.

Obviously.

Little Baby's Ice Cream

That doesn't look like ice cream.

Carl's Jr. Superbowl Commercial 2011

To be honest, I couldn't get through the entirety of this commercial.

I had to stop around 10 seconds in and even that was too much.

Any Anti Smoking Ad

These ads really lay it on thick.

They're not so much gross as they are disturbing, as they should be.

The grossest part about the commercials is that everything they say about smoking is true.

Orkin Commercials

Pests.

In your home.

Touching your skin.

Eating your flesh.

Thanks for reminding us how gross insects can be Orkin, as if we forgot.

Pillsbury Poop-Boy

This can't be real and it probably isn't.

Just what you want to see in an advertisement for food.

A little chef pooping out something that looks just like the food being advertised.
